

Rachelle Ann Piñero, Miracle Carlos, Laura Melissa Marquez BSEN Class of 2010

Miracle's Native Materials Supply is a company that aims to provide good quality indigenous raw materials, mainly woven abaca and water lily, to various manufacturers. The company was founded by Ms. Miracle R. Carlos in the year 2009, having this year as the "Year of Indigenous Materials" as declared by the United Nation. We focus on our client's goal to have a fresh look on their products and at the same time following the mission of UN, which is to minimize global warming.

One of the company's missions is to help small enterprises around Metro Manila and some other provinces sustain their livelihood. As part of that mission, we have our products woven by the weavers association in Pampanga.

Are you looking for an alternative to the food served at your office canteen? Or perhaps good-value restaurants are quite far from your work? Pinoy Foody offers inexpensive options for you right at your doorstep. This venture, started-up by Melissa Marquez in 2009, will deliver home-style pinoy meals right to your office. With prices ranging from P45-P60/pack, which at times comes even with something for the sweet tooth, it certainly offers good value. Started with less than fifty-thousand in capital, Melissa more than recouped her initial investment by the time she graduated. Pinoy Foody can also provide a variety of options if you need food packs for your events.

Similarly, if you are looking for a supplier of dumplings, specifically healthier siomai, then look no further. Pinoy Foody's "sister company" started up in 2009 by Ashley Marquez - Melissa's sister and fellow 2010-alumna - can answer your need. She currently supplies various canteens and other food outlets by the thousands. (Call/text 0921-372-9796 for more details.)

MIKRONE

POWDER COATING SERVICES

One hallmark of an entrepreneur is the ability to overcome adversity. Soon after starting her powder-coating operations in early 2009, Rachelle Pinero's startup venture encountered disaster - a fire broke out in her factory.

Although the fire was eventually extinguished, the entrepreneurial flame that burned within her just got more intense. She re-started her operations and sought out her previous clients who were very pleased with the quality of her startup's work before the disaster. Getting back her clients allowed the venture to bounce back to profitability almost immediately.

Rachelle and her business were recently featured on a television show (see video clip).
